Synopsis: Crime Blue Abyss Physical Remorse is inspired by the life and works of Amadeo de Souza-Cardoso. This controversial 20th century painter defied the world avant-garde of his time: "I don't follow schools. I am an impressionist, cubist, futurist, abstractionist. A melting pot. The real tradition is not to try and relive the past – which is impossible to achieve – but rather something that sets up a follow-through, as happens with parents and children. A child and his father are never alike." The film follows Amadeo's motto. It crosses pictorial fiction - suggested by the emblematic picture "The Procession", painted in Paris in 1913 - with Portuguese contemporary reality.

Edgar Pêra

Born in Lisbon, Portugal, in 1960. The film that better synthesizes the first period of the profuse (more than one hundred works for cinema, tv, internet, shows, galleries, events) and controversial work by Edgar Pêra is A Janela (Maryalva Mix) (Locarno Film Festival 2001). “Iconoclast” for some, “cine-poet-provocator” for others, Pêra directs films compulsively since A Cidade de Cassiano (Grand Prize Films D’architecture 1991), without renouncing the reflection about the reality of his country, either on documentary (Movimentos Perpétuos - 3 Awards at Indie Lisboa 2006) or on fiction (O Barão, in preparation). Several retrospectives about his work were made in Amsterdam - World Wide VideoFestival, France – Festival Travelling, Lisboa - Videoteca, Reus - I Short Film Festival, Porto – Rivoli, Braga - Videoteca, among others. In 2006, he won the Pasolini Award for his career, together with Alejandro Jodorowsky, Agnes B. and Fernando Arrabal, in Paris.
