Synopsis: In a rocky island exposed to the elements, a lighthouse keeper lives alone with his daughter. From the top of his tower, the father keeps vigil to the horizon line and for the safety of the passing sails. With no other company, the girl develops a unique complicity with the sea, which brings her toys in the shape of debris on the shore. Following the rhythm of the waves, these objects will unveil previous events, memories that the tide cannot erase…

Pedro Serrazina

Pedro Serrazina is an award-winning director, senior lecturer and animation researcher. His first short, “Tale about the Cat and the Moon”, was premiered internationally at the Cannes Film Festival, won multiple awards and is still regularly screened in retrospectives and festivals.

His work ranges from short films and international site-specific installations, to music videos, workshops and academic projects. Serrazina is interested in the interconnections between architecture, public space, documentary and animation, and his practice-based PhD was dedicated to the use of animated space as a tool to reflect on social space. His work has been exhibited internationally (Tunisia, São Paulo, USA, Montreal, Lisbon). A member of the Society for Animation Studies and Ecstatic Truth, Serrazina is currently preparing his next short documentary film, "What remains of us".
